FAQs

Why does my range make noises when I'm cooking?

Temperature changes during preheat and cool-down can make parts of the range expand and contract. The controls click as they work to create even cooking temperatures. Different fans run to heat up the oven or cool down different parts of oven, even when it's off. These sounds are normal.

My range is brand new - why doesn't my cooktop work?

Your installer may have left the lever for the gas supply off while working to set up your range. Check out the installation instructions for how to turn the lever back on.

This oven doesn't work like my old one. What's wrong?

We know adjustment isn't always easy. As you get used to a new range, you may need to test and adjust cooking times and temperatures for your recipes. Your Use & Care Manual has rack position and bakeware recommendations to help you get the best baking results. For instructions on how to adjust temperature offset, consult your Use & Care Manual or call us if you need help!

Why does my oven smoke when I use Air Fry?

Air Fry circulates super-heated air all around food and bakeware. Some smoke is normal. Drippings from high-fat or greasy foods combined with hot air from the oven can cause smoke to occur. Visit Frigidaire.com for additional FAQs and Air Fry Tips.

Find more troubleshooting tips in the back of your Use & Care Manual.
